

Young Grand Duke to Be Trained as American

GRAND DUKE FRIEDRICH FRANZ

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin are being made the targets of a series of newspaper attacks because of their marked partiality for things that are American. They are known to be regular customers of New York tailors, modistes and boot-makers, and, because of their numerous trans-Atlantic friends, both speak English with a Yankee accent, and, worst of all, they use slang, it is said. The last straw, according to their critics, is the manner in which they are training their only son, the hereditary Grand Duke, Friedrich Franz, three years old, who has two American nurses, and is being educated on the most improved American plan.

PROBE IS ON; LOCK UP TWO OF TRAINMEN

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) approaching train was down upon him with the block even as he set his torpedoes. The charge tentatively laid against him is that he failed to set off a Coston signal, as it is claimed was his duty in the fog which prevailed.

That Engineer Miller received warning that he was closely following the Bar Harbor train at Meriden, beyond the scene of the accident, is the evidence of Lawyer C. J. Hamner of that city, who yesterday told of hearing two trains pass his home and hearing the White Mountain express explode two torpedoes of warning.

The evidence of L. G. Morse, of Chicago, a passenger on the Bar Harbor express, is a severe arraignment of the trainmen in charge of that train. Mr. Morse says emphatically that the brakes on the Bar Harbor express were set at the time the wreck occurred. Having been a brakeman on the Boston & Maine road at one time, he lost no time when the train stopped in getting off to see what the cause of the stop.

Charges Brakemen With Neglect. At this time, he says, he saw the brakeman, who he supposed was the flagman, standing at about the thirtieth car on the train whistling and tossing pebbles into the bushes beside the tracks. He walked to the engine and had taken a few steps when he heard the crack of the two torpedoes followed almost immediately by the crash, the grinding of the huge locomotive No. 1337 through the cars, followed by the screams of the dying and wounded.

"The torpedoes were entirely too near the train to have given any adequate warning of danger," says Mr. Morse. "The brakeman should have gone back to have signalled the following train. We had been at a stop fully six minutes when the crash came, ample time for the train behind us to have been stopped."

Criticism Construction of Cars. Mr. Morse was also emphatic in his criticism of the construction of the cars of the train. "Mr. Mellen testified before the L. C. C.," he said, "that all the trains were equipped with steel eye beams. On our train there was not a single steel beam. I am sure of this for I have made an examination of every car, having statement of Mr. Mellen in mind when I did so."

Pres. Howard Elliott, whose ghastly introduction to the management of the New Haven road had already given him a careworn look, was early at his office today, declining to add to his statement that every effort would be made to give the public detail of evidence as the facts were known.

CAMINETTI TRIAL IS NEARING END

Lola Norris Tells of Her Trip to Reno. Says She Doesn't Love Man Now.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—Except for brief minor testimony to be introduced Wednesday, the government Tuesday completed its case against F. Drew Caminetti, whom it seeks to prove guilty of violating the Mann act by transporting Lola Norris for immoral purposes from her home in Sacramento to Reno, Nev. The defense promised to rest Thursday.

Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris were the chief figures of the day. Miss Warrington resolutely reaffirmed the responsibility of Maury I. Diggs, recently found guilty, for her downfall. Champagne had been served in Diggs' office, she said. "I guess," she added shamefacedly, "I was intoxicated."

She testified that at no time had wines or liquors been ordered by her or Miss Norris but always at the instance of the men. Miss Norris later confirmed this testimony.

Lola Norris repeated more fully than in the Diggs trial, the story of her relations with Caminetti.

"Was anything said about marriage before March 1?" she was asked. The elopement did not take place until the early morning of March 10 and in the meantime there had been trips to San Francisco, Stockton, San Jose and Jackson.

Mentioned Marriage.

"No," was the answer. "The day before we left for Reno, Mr. Caminetti said his wife would start action for divorce at once and then we could be married."

"I introduced Mr. Caminetti to my people," she testified, "under a false name, because I didn't want them to know I was going with a married man."

"Then why did you continue to go with Caminetti?"

"Well, I knew it was not proper. If they had been living properly it might have made a difference. I did not feel that I was doing her (Mrs. Caminetti) an injustice, as he told me they were going to be separated."

Robert Devlin, for the defense, in cross examining the witness, dwelt on the return trip from Reno.

"Didn't you tell Dist. Atty. Atkinson that you and Miss Warrington had occupied the same berth on the way to Reno?"

"Yes," she testified. "I would not believe what they told me about Drew's deceiving me—not until later."

"You were still in love with him then?"

"Yes." "What are your feelings toward him now?"

"The girl hung her head and did not answer." "Do you feel the same affection for him?"

There was another moment of silence before she answered, "No." In this and other passages of the cross examination the essentials of her story were not changed. Its essence was that Caminetti had terrified her into leaving her home by threats of scandal; that Diggs had presented the arguments and Caminetti had followed them with personal persuasions.
